Assignment requirements:

1) Your presentation ought to last for between 5-7 minutes.
2) Each member of your team must present an aspect of the research.
3) You must turn in a written script of your presentation, one week prior to the due date and presentation to the class. In this outline you must supply reference to your sources, and provide footnotes to indicate sources for your statements. If you use materials found on the World Wide Web, then you must provide the complete URL and a time and date. Remember to be discriminating about what you find on the web.

Tips and advice for creating a group project:

a) Be creative and think outside the box.
b) Grab the attention of your audience at the outset with an interesting lead.
c) Use an “inverted pyramid” structure that puts the most important information first.
d) Make your topic come to life with interesting quotes, a clear, well-written script, and a strong ending. Have a windup that reminds listeners what they heard.
e) Go online to listen to podcasts. Take note of what works and what does not work: http://blog.dickinson.edu/index.php
